BOTH SIDES OF THE MOGOLLON TRAGEDY

Difference of Opinion About
Who Was to Blame for Clark's Killing.

Mogollon, N. M., Aug. 21.
Editor El Paso Herald:
Your dispatch dated Socorro, N. M., Aug. 27, is entirely at variance with the facts about the murder of Charles Clark of this place. Mr. Huntington, an employee of the Socorro mines, swore out a warrant for the arrest of J. A. Beal, a mounted policeman, charging him with issuing a challenge to fight a duel. Justice of the peace Sorenson issued the warrant and placed it in the hands of Mr. Clark for service. Beal and Putnam got news that the warrant had been issued, and Friday evening came down from the Socorro mines, where they had been stopping, apparently intending to resist the warrant, make trouble for Clark and judge Sorenson, and build up the people. Beal went into Clark's saloon, and Clark invited him to have a drink. After the drink, Clark took Beal a little to one side and handed him the warrant, all in a very quiet, gentlemanly manner. Clark was unarmed at the time. Beal, after reading the warrant, thrust it into his pocket, and swearing vilely, said, "No man can arrest me, I will arrest you." At the same time drawing his gun, Clark stepped on one side and Beal passed on the other, and immediately he and Putnam opened fire on Clark. It is believed that Putnam fired the first shot, and that Beal fired the fatal shot, though they both claimed the honor of doing the murder. Clark did not fire a shot, and in his dying statement says he did not.

Some of our mounted policemen seem to think that they have "divine rights" and are above the law.
Neither the mounted police nor anyone else ever suspected Mr. Clark of complicity in the murder of Jose Dominguez, the stage driver.
We have been peaceable citizens here at Mogollon. We will welcome the presence of officers who have sense enough to be themselves law abiding citizens, but we deplore the presence of men armed with official authority, while their only qualification for office seems to be their reputations as bad men and killers.

Very respectfully,
C. H. Kirkpatrick,
And many citizens.

THE OTHER SIDE.

Socorro, N. M., Aug. 31, 1910.

Editor El Paso Herald:

Sheriff Sanchez, of Socorro county, and mounted police sergeant John Collier arrived here this morning on the 1:30 train, having in charge mounted police officer A. J. Beal and constable E. G. Putnam, of Mogollon. Last Saturday morning sheriff Sanchez received a telegram notifying him of a shooting which had occurred in Mogollon in which Charles Clark lost his life and immediately the sheriff went to the scene of the killing, together with officer Collier, and found things looking menacing for the two officers, Beal and Putnam, and the air was filled with threats, as it has been since the last boldup and killing of Dominguez. In an interview with the officers the following facts were elicited: On last Friday night about 10 or 11 o'clock officer Beal was passing the saloon run by Charles Clark, and Clark informed Beal that he wanted to have a word with him, and that he wanted to step inside the saloon. Beal followed Clark and the latter walked to the rear of the saloon, Beal following him and Clark then got out a paper which he stated was a warrant issued by Sorenson for Beal's arrest, charging him with challenging another party to a duel. Beal told Clark that he would answer that or any charge they wished to bring against him in the morning at the proper time and stand out of the saloon, and noticing that Clark had a six shooter in his hand was very cautious and backed toward the door.

Says Clark Fired First.

Clark laid the gun down and Beal believed that would be the last of it; however, just upon reaching the door, Clark reached behind it and got hold of a Winchester which was hidden there and raised it to his shoulder, but before he could take aim Beal shouted to Putnam, who was sitting down about 20 steps from the saloon and intimated that he was in danger. Putnam stepped up quickly during which time Clark had fired one shot which went between Beal and Putnam and it was then that Beal fired, hitting Clark's left arm as it was outstretched and still holding the Winchester, and the bullet passed through Clark's left arm, grazing the chest and then followed a course penetrating the right shoulder and almost simultaneously Putnam fired one shot which entered the body of Clark and did so only after the danger to himself had been exposed. Clark fell and there was no more shooting so far as the tragedy is concerned, but on the road Beal's 30-30 automatic went off accidentally, which accounts for the fourth shot fired, that being all that is any evidence of having been heard on that occasion.

son, who had been notified prior to this that he would have to resign or proceedings would be filed against him for malfeasance in office, sent in his resignation, although he had refused to do before and it was received by telegraph soon after the tragedy. Others who had held commissions as deputy sheriffs in Mogollon had their commissions revoked. Charles Clark had at one time been commissioned as a deputy sheriff, and after the arrest of Beal and Putnam, his commission was canceled on the 29th of August as disclosed by the records prior to the shooting.

William Day, who is now and was located in the county jail here at a time before the killing, made a statement in which he said the bad element at Mogollon had threatened serious injury at least to the members of the mounted police if they were called in to run that camp, and that they did not propose to have them come there and close them up. Information has been received from other sources which shows that the feeling in Mogollon against the mounted police of the killing of Jose Dominguez was strongly resented, although a few of the citizens did go out on horseback looking for the fugitive or fugitives and this resentment was directed particularly against the mounted police and not against the sheriff's department. It is also claimed by recent visitors to the camp that there was a sentiment against the sheriff's department.

Conditions Are Bad.

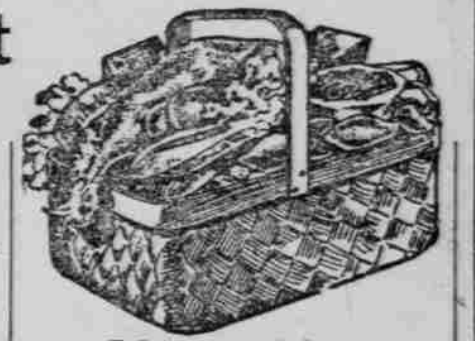

Within the past few weeks conditions at Mogollon have been anything but peaceable, there having occurred one robbery, two holdups and the killing of Jose Dominguez before this shooting, and taking into consideration the population of Mogollon this is a bad indication. A person who is said to have been near the scene of the killing of Charles Clark stated that Clark fired the first shot and this statement is corroborated. Officers and others who have been at Mogollon since the killing are emphatic in their statement that Beal and Putnam did what any other officers would have done under like circumstances. That Clark was not such a peaceful and desirable citizen has been attested to by William Day and others who made statements regarding him and his conduct before his demise, and they claim to have known him pretty well, having been frequent visitors at the saloon and in a number of poker games with Clark night after night.

It is claimed that there are 25 or 30 people anxious to appear against Beal and Putnam as witnesses, although only two were wanted to appear in the tragedy outside of the principals, and this anxiety, it is said, is an indication of the desire of a certain element of Mogollon to get rid of the officers who are now in their midst. The county officials of Socorro county, in the affairs out there and break up a camp of vicious government. Burnside, formerly constable at Mogollon, but who resigned after the arrest of Beal, stated that during his incumbency he had also been threatened at the point of a gun for trying to enforce law and order in the camp. For a while after Clark's death and as though Beal and Putnam would have any fight for their lives and it was only due to the arrival of other officers that stringent measures were not taken. This is the condition here of the day, taken from the reports of officers and disinterested parties familiar with the situation.

Capt. Fornoff's Statement.

Capt. Fred Fornoff, in an interview this morning said: "This tragedy is the result of a combat between law and order and the vicious forces, which, unfortunately, prevail in nearly all isolated mountainous camps and is a desire by the bad element for wide open conditions. The dire has had a terrible effect in Mogollon as they have had in all communities where they are permitted to exist. My men are in the Mogollon mountains at the request of the law officers of Socorro county, including the sheriff and district attorney and the men who represent industrial enterprises tributary to Mogollon. I will use every effort to preserve peace and order in Mogollon or any other district where I am called upon to control similar conditions in accordance with my duties and know the men with me will do the same."
"The people who profited most by the wide open conditions existing in Mogollon are the loudest in their denunciation of the acts of Beal and Putnam and every effort that has been made by others to preserve peace and order in that camp. They are taking extraordinary care to be active against those men but after the hold-up of the two Mexican women and the robbery there was little sorrow or feeling in the affair but rather the camp was alive with some jubilant pleasures that night; again, when Dominguez was killed the sympathizers were few and those who were willing to lend any aid were the better element of citizens of Mogollon, and in many instances the officers who have gone to Mogollon for the purpose of bettering conditions have been hindered rather than assisted by those who were in a position to help them. Especially is this so in regard to the investigation of the recent hold-ups had there."

HORN SILVER FOUND IN TOMBSTONE CAMP

M. M. Mills Says That Anyone Can Make a Fortune With Little Work.

M. M. Mills, an old time miner and prospector, now in the Tombstone district of Arizona, where he has been the past four months, writes that it is the only camp where he has been that he has found native and horn silver, and that sylvanite, gold, lead and copper will be the main product in the depth. In the south end of the district, lead occurs in two forms, he says, galena and carbonates, the carbonates carrying silver in very high values and some gold. Iron is found in three forms: hematite, chromium and manganese. Gold is a rare thing to find in its free state, while native or metallic silver crops on the surface in many places. The formation compares with that of Bisbee and Clifton, while the quartzite has been neglected where the copper will be found. As Tombstone is a high grade silver camp, silver may occur in the copper, as it shows from the surface.

"Before going further," says Mr. Mills, "I flatter myself as being the best posted prospector in this camp, as I have visited almost every shaft from a five foot depth, to as deep as they go, and have tested the same as to the values and the kind of machinery to leave the tailings free from the values, and will further say unhesitatingly, that I am not afraid to meet the best experts on the ground without fear that my statements will be contradicted, and I fully believe that if any one who wishes to use enough to install a small amount of machinery and is conservative, he can make profits over and above expenses, and develop a fortune."
